Introduction

The NYC Arts in Education Roundtable

The NYC Arts in Education Roundtable is a member-driven organization for arts in education professionals who collaboratively provide and participate in high quality professional development programs for the arts in education community. The Roundtable is the only organization exclusively dedicated to provided networking, skills building, and best practice sharing for arts educators in New York. Currently, there are 970 members, including 106 organizations. The Roundtable's programs are rooted in the need for high quality arts education programs. Our goal is to assist arts educators to do their best work, helping students succeed in and through the arts. The Roundtable's primary activities include our annual two-day Face to Face arts in education conference and monthly professional development programs.

The only event of its kind in NYC and the largest in the state, Face to Face is a professional development conference for arts administrators, teaching artists, and others interested in the field of arts in education. The conference strives to demonstrate effective teaching and learning strategies for practitioners in the field of arts in education, as well as to provide forums for discussion of other critical issues such as policy and advocacy, assessment, fundraising, and organizational management. The conference encompasses approximately 35 break-out sessions, keynotes, a plenary session, and two networking events.

Face to Face is held over two days in April at The City College of New York, Shepard Hall. Each year, the conference committee selects a theme which informs choices on keynote speakers and the focal point for the conversation.

Content for the Face to Face 2018 conference is currently being confirmed. For more information, please visit our website: www.nycaieroundtable.org.
